ACQUISITIONS

Recent acquisitions of STANFORD UNIVERSITY LIBRARIES include a complete facsimile edition, consisting of 488 plates in twenty portfolios, of the drawings in the Uffizi Gallery in Florence, Italy. This collection consists of mostly Italian drawings and the periods represented range from the fifteenth to the eighteenth centuries. The importance of the Stanford copy is enhanced by the fact that a number of the original drawings failed to survive the recent Florence flood.

The papers of the late J. Arthur Younger (1893-1967), U.S. Congressman from California's 11th District (San Mateo County), were donated to the Library in April by his widow, Mrs. Norma Younger, and his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Robinson, Jr. Including most of the Representative's office files, the papers are of special interest because of Mr. Younger's role as one of the first proponents of an executive department for urban affairs.

Additions in the past few months to the Special Collection of Modern Literature, WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY LIBRARIES, are representative of the lines of research interest in this four-year-old Collection. Poet James Merrill has given the worksheets of more than 250 poems, drafts of two plays and nine notebooks, dating from 1948 to 1963, containing drafts of poems, diary entries and notes on his own and others' work. Novelist George P. Elliott has added the drafts of a group of short stories, an unpublished play, and 25 critical essays, a number of them autobiographical. The 2,600 pages of early drafts and notes by William Gass of his first novel, Oenoscope's Luck, as well as 1,700 manuscript and typescript pages which later comprised the book, are now part of the Special Collection. The letters of Tom Clark, poetry editor of Paris Review and a participant in numerous small press ventures in England, to his colleague Andrew Crozier are a useful view of that poet's literary and personal affairs in Britain from 1964 to 1967. Robert Sward also writes from and about Britain in the addition of 325 letters to his papers. Students of the history of contemporary publishing will find much useful comment on the workings of the private press in new collections from Robert Creeley, Robert Duncan, Paul Blackburn, Howard Nemerov and Denise Levertov. Individual manuscripts of Ivy Compton-Burnett and Jocelyn Brooke have also been acquired, together with typescripts of an interview with Vladimir Nabokov, revised by him.

Small collections of letters from Conrad Aiken, C. Day-Lewis and Kenneth Rexroth and Mari-ann Moore are also new in the Collection, as is a taped interview with Thomas Merton.

The COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY LIBRARIES have received recently several notable gift collections.

Dr. Corliss Lamont (Ph.D., 1932) has established a collection of manuscripts and printed materials relating to the English poet, John Masefield, a friend of the Lamont family over many years. The nucleus of the collection is a group of 99 autograph letters written by Masefield, many of which contain critical commentary on his fellow poets, among them A. E. Houseman, Robert Frost, Thomas Hardy, and Stephen Vincent Benét. Also included are two autograph manuscripts of poems by Masefield, three letters from Judith Masefield, and several printed items pertaining to the poet's death.

W. W. Norton and Company, book publishers, have presented their files of correspondence and papers covering the early years of the company, 1923-1945. Its roster of authors has included Bertrand Russell, Margaret Sanger, Edith Hamilton, Henry Handel Richardson, John Dewey, José Ortega y Gasset, Aaron Copland, Douglas Moore, Carlos Chavez, Irwin Edman, Paul Henry Lang, Maria Rainer Rilke, and Sigmund Freud, and the collection contains significant files of correspondence by, or relating to, each of them.

Mrs. Nina Ferrero Raditsa has added another installment of the papers and correspondence of her distinguished father Guglielmo Ferrero. The present gift, numbering more than 6,000 pieces, comprises the incoming correspondence from the early part of this century to the 1930's, and contains important letters from Romain Rolland, Paul Valéry, King Albert of the Belgians, Albert Einstein, and Count Sforza.

The papers of Lillian D. Wald, relating to the founding and administration of the Henry Street Settlement, have recently been presented by the Visiting Nurse Service of New York through the good offices of its executive director, Mrs. Eva M. Reese. The papers cover Miss Wald's participation not only in the Settlement, but also in numerous philanthropic and liberal causes, including those in the fields of child welfare, unemployment, immigration, civil liberties, and the Socialist Party. The correspondence files contain letters from public figures and writers, among them Jane Addams, Roger N. Baldwin, Van Wyck Brooks, Henry Ford, Zona Gale, John Galsworthy, Samuel Gompers, William D. Howells, Charles Evans.
Hughes, Frances Perkins, Dorothy Thompson, Norman Thomas, Ida Tarbell, Margaret Sang-er, and Jacob Riis.

- Through purchase and gift, Kent State University has acquired the entire stock of Gilman’s, a well-known bookseller in Crompond, New York. Gilman’s has been run since 1929 by two brothers, Clarence and David Gilman, in a suburb of Peekskill. The 250,000 volume collection includes many out-of-print and rare books covering all areas with emphasis on literature and history. The collection will be placed in storage until completion of a new library in the spring of 1970.

Awards

- The New York State Education Department, Division of Library Development, has awarded the New York Metropolitan Reference and Research Library Agency (METRO) a special project grant of $48,000.00 to institute a Cooperative Acquisition and Storage Center (CASC). The CASC project is designed to facilitate access to materials which are not now available in the area or cannot, for reasons of space, staff, or funds, be made accessible beyond the individual library’s primary audience. It will also obviate the duplication of infrequently used materials in libraries in the area.

Buildings

- With the installation of the shelving in June 1968, the new Learning Resources Center of Monroe County Community College, Monroe, Michigan, was completed. Construction of the 52,300 sq. ft. LRC building began in 1966 as one of the initial four permanent buildings on campus. Cost of the LRC, including site development, was $1,446,021.00. Furniture and equipment in the Library and Audiovisual areas only of the building totaled $118,492.38. Currently the LRC contains the library on the main floor; audiovisual areas, instructional lab, lecture room, and five classrooms in the basement. On the second floor the library maintains a 3,120 sq. ft. reading room; also on the second floor are faculty offices around two walls and nine classrooms.

- The University of Pittsburgh dedicated on September 6 its new Hillman Library, named in honor of John Hartwell Hillman, Jr. The building was funded largely through a donation of more than $3,000,000.00 from the Hillman Foundation and an appropriation from the General State Authority of $8,235,000.00. The five-story structure, which can house some 1.2 million volumes, contains 255,000 square feet of floor space. The first and second floors are primarily for undergraduate services.

- Braziller’s facsimile reproduction of the long-lost Caxton translation of Ovid’s Metamorphoses is now available for $290 for the boxed set of two volumes. Books 1-9 of this important manuscript were lost some three centuries ago but turned up in 1964 in the collection of Sir Thomas Phillipps. Purchased at Sotheby’s by an American collector for £90,000, the work was scheduled to be exported to the United States when it was rescued by the New York publisher, George Braziller, who engaged to publish a facsimile edition to raise funds for its retention in England, and Eugène Power of Ann Arbor, who agreed to finance the project with an interest-free loan of $200,000.

As a result of these efforts, the manuscript of Books 1-9 of the Caston Ovid are now ensconced in Magdalene College, Cambridge, beside Books 10-15 of the work which had been placed there 250 years ago by the celebrated diarist Samuel Pepys. The 1,200 hand-numbered facsimile copies of the entire work are now heavily subscribed, but some copies are still available for purchase by libraries and collectors.

In 1976 our Republic will observe the Bicentennial of Independence and the war fought to secure it. General Microfilm Company plans to offer the publication of out-of-print source materials on the American Revolution. The series will be designed to serve not only advanced scholars but also students of the American Revolution on all levels of competence. It will be based on standard bibliographies. The first group will be based on William Spohn Baker, Bibliotheca Washingtoniana (1889) and a supplement now in progress. Microfilm editions of items in the supplement will include all material in the public domain which is available for microform copying.

Subsequent groups will be based on bibliographies in (a) other biographical studies of Revolutionary personalities and (b) the Revolutionary sections in local, state, and regional bibliographies. Thus it will be possible to include related materials in consecutive order on a specific set of rolls and small libraries with local interests may order them separately from the entire series.

It is anticipated that some 50,000 to 75,000 pages will be delivered annually, commencing in the fall of 1969 and that the basic literature of the American Revolution will be complete in this series by 1981, the end of the Bicentennial.
