• The Encyclopedia of Police Science, edited by William G. Bailey (718 pages, February 1989), provides an introductory statement on major topics of law enforcement. Although not an exhaustive treatment, this encyclopedia will prove useful to undergraduates whose only exposure to criminal justice is "Police Academy 3." The 143 chapters cover such areas as the FBI, deadly force, fingerprinting, hypnosis in police work, organized crime, policewomen, and white-collar crime. Copies may be ordered for $77.00 from Garland Publishing, 136 Madison Ave., New York, NY 10016. ISBN 0-8240-6627-8.

• Librarians for the New Millennium, edited by William E. Moen and Kathleen M. Heim (122 pages, 1988), was prepared originally for participants in the preconference, sponsored by ALA's Office for Library Personnel Resources at the 1988 Annual Conference in New Orleans, entitled "Each One Reach One: Recruiting for the Profession." Following an introductory chapter by Kathleen Heim, chapter authors include: Ann Randall on minority recruitment; Janet Swan Hill on recruitment for cataloging; Lorene B. Brown on recruiting science librarians; Phyllis J. Hudson on recruitment for academic librarianship; and Rosemary Dumont on recruiting students into librarianship. The concluding chapter by William E. Moen provides a preliminary report on "Library and Information Science Student Attitudes, Demographics and Aspirations Survey: Who We Are and Why We Are Here." The survey was conducted by Moen and Heim in the spring of 1988 and represents data collected from 3,484 students in ALA-accredited programs regarding demographics, perceptions of library careers, reasons for choice of library and information science work, job aspirations, and income expectations. Copies may be ordered for $10 from ALA/OLPR, 50 E. Huron St., Chicago, IL 60611-2795. ISBN 0-8389-7259-4.

• Meridian (no. 1, 1989– ) is a new semi-annual journal of map librarianship launched by the ALA Map and Geography Round Table. The journal, edited by Philip Hoehn (University of California, Berkeley), intends to publish articles and research notes that: 1) advance the organization and dissemination of cartographic, geographic, and remote sending information; and 2) describe and document the major trends and issues in the professional development of cartographic and geographic librarianship in North America. Included in the first issue are articles on the history of the Library of Congress Geography and Map Division and the charting of the Mississippi Delta by the U.S. Coast Survey. A research note discusses pre-20th century women cartographers. Subscription rates (checks payable to ALA/MAGERT) are $20 for individuals, $25 for institutions, and may be ordered from Peter L. Stark, Subscription Manager, Map Library, University of Oregon, 165 Condon Hall, Eugene, OR 97403-1299. ISSN 1040-7421.

• The Proceedings of the International Symposium on New Techniques and Applications in Libraries (576 pages, 1989), held in Xi'an, China, in September 1988, contain 74 keynote and contributed papers from the symposium. About two-thirds of the papers were presented by librarians and information specialists in the People's Republic of China, affording detail and breadth on China's approaches in harnessing new information technologies to meet the nation's development needs. Broad subject groupings include CD-ROM applications, cataloging systems, circulation systems, online information retrieval, library automation, library and information services, and miscellaneous papers treating other computer applications. The University, which co-sponsored the symposium with Xi'an Jiaotong University, has received a very limited number of the Proceedings for sale in North America at $40 (plus $2 shipping). Prepaid orders may be sent to Paulette Hodges, Administrative Office, Alden Library, Ohio University, Athens, OH 45701-2978.

• Tools of the Profession, edited by Hilary Kanter (129 pages, 1988), is a collection of bibliographies of information sources compiled by members of 17 divisions of the Special Libraries Association.
