YOU ASKED FOR THE WORLD—

As communications technology makes the world a smaller and smaller place, global coverage has moved from an innovation to a necessity. Patrons once satisfied with books published in the U.S. now demand access to titles published around the world.

A BETTER WAY TO SEARCH DATABASES

We started in 1985, database searchers committed to better search software design. We became the premier vendor of Medline, then expanded our catalog to other databases. Last year we won Information World Review's PRODUCT OF THE YEAR for faster, easier search software. But a better way means meeting the evolving needs - individual and campus wide - of today's library users.

Announcing OVID: a database interface so flexible it molds itself to your search environment.

With OVID you're free to move from one operating system to another without retraining. OVID's Common User Interface assures identical functionality in DOS, Windows and UNIX.

A haven for beginners, OVID's Easy Mode has on screen prompts. The more experienced can pull-down menus showing an array of search options. Experts will feel at home using online syntax.

Search with natural language if you like. OVID mapping cuts through the mystery of controlled vocabularies, homing in on precisely matching subject headings.

There's an unprecedented array of search tools - indexes, thesauri, limits and fields - many never before available in an interface. They're all standard OVID features.

HELP for every search function is context-sensitive and on screen, never more than a keystroke or mouse click away.

OVID. A better way to search ERIC, Current Contents®, PsycINFO®, Medline, Readers' Guide Abstracts, EMBASE and more.

About the cover
This conceptual sketch by John Gould (1804–1881), the British ornithological illustrator, is titled “Trogon elegans” or the graceful trogon. Part compositional diagram and part lighting appreciation of the shape and attitude of the birds, this was passed on to Gould’s associate, H. C. Richter, for a finished drawing on paper and subsequently on the lithographic stone. It was published as a hand-colored lithograph in Gould’s Monograph of the Trogonidae (1875). The Kenneth Spencer Research Library at the University of Kansas, Lawrence, houses the most extensive collection of the work of John Gould and his associates, including 3,000 published plates and some 2,000 original sketches, tracings, and transfer sheets, 85% of those still extant. For more about the Spencer Library see the article on page 9.

In the News

Happy New Year! The coming of the New Year is a time of celebration, of reviewing past accomplishments, and looking forward with great hope to the coming year. In this issue we celebrate not just the beginning of a new year but the 25th anniversary of the Kenneth Spencer Research Library. Thanks to James Helyar and Alexandra Mason for providing the lovely cover artwork and the history of special collections at the University of Kansas.

It is hard to think about special collections without also thinking of preservation. This issue includes, courtesy of Dorothy Wright, a practical guide for evaluating photocopiers to be used for inhouse preservation purposes.

In this issue we also bring you conference reports on the Coalition for Networked Information and the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges, thanks respectively to Tom Kirk and Barbara Ford. Both organizations are discussing technology and CNI has an electronic means for keeping up with its discussions.

Speaking of technology, Blake Gumprecht continues our series on Internet resources with his guide to government information available on the Net.

As an editor, one of the more rewarding experiences I can have is to find that something we’ve published has provoked a response (any response is more rewarding than none). It may be that an article has added to a reader’s professional development or given new insight or simply generated discussion. Therefore, I was pleased to find that Beth Shapiro’s piece on the myths of faculty status (November 1993) was discussed on the listserv, Collib-L, as well as in some printed responses (see pages 25 and 26). (An aside: if you send a message to a listserv about something you have read here, take a minute to send me a copy so I can share it with all of our readers.)

Once again, I want to thank Eldon Tamblyn for providing us with the yearly index to C&RL News. His efforts are greatly appreciated.
