News notes

- The Western New England College School of Law Library, Springfield, Massachusetts, has recently received the Law Library Publication Award for 1989 from the American Association of Law Libraries. The Law Library Publication Award honors achievement in creating in-house, user-oriented, library materials of outstanding quality and significance. Western New England College received the award for the Pathfinder series, and other publications. The Pathfinder series is a series of bibliographies or “how-to” guides that highlight legal items of interest or help library patrons do legal research. Some current Pathfinder guides are: AIDS—The Legal Dimension, Major Sources in Securities Regulation and Corporate Finance, Congressional Terms and Sessions, and Massachusetts Judicial System.

Profiles

Sharon J. Rogers, university librarian at the George Washington University, Washington, D.C., has been named assistant vice-president for academic affairs and university librarian. She is also an adjunct associate professor of sociology. In her new role as assistant vice-president, Rogers will be given broader administrative responsibility for academic affairs. She will also be responsible for developing the library at the university’s new Loudoun County campus scheduled to open in 1991. As university librarian, Rogers is the senior administrator for the university’s undergraduate and graduate general research collections housed in Melvin Gelman Library. During her tenure at George Washington University, she has directed the remodeling of Gelman Library and the automation conversion of a card catalog system to compact disc, as well as other significant improvements in the university’s periodical services. Among the library services that have been developed and offered to the Washington community under her leadership is “Collections DC,” a computerized database which houses information about Washington’s extensive historical and cultural resources.

Rogers joined George Washington University in 1984 as university librarian. Prior to 1984, she held various faculty and administrative positions at Bowling Green State University, the University of Toledo, Alfred University, and Washington State University. Her numerous professional affiliations include council member of the American Library Association (ALA), ALA representative to the American Council on Education, board member of WRLC and president of the Users Council of the Online Computer Library Center. She also served as president of the Association of College and Research Libraries from 1984 to 1985. A prolific writer, her work has appeared in several books and journals including Libraries and the Search For Academic Excellence and College & Research Libraries News.

Rhoda Garoogian has been appointed chairperson of the Graduate Library and Information Science Department at the Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, New York. From December 1985 through August 1988, Garoogian was director of the Wilsonline Information System at H.W. Wilson Company, which provided customer support for Wilsonline, Wilssearch, and Wilsondisc. Garoogian was assistant professor at the Palmer School of Library and Information Science at Long Island University, C.W. Post Campus, and reference librarian at both the Brooklyn College Library (1975–1981) and the Medgar Evers College Library (1976). She has numerous papers and publications to her credit and she received the Special Libraries Association Fannie L. Simone Award for contribution to publishing in 1988. Garoogian is a member of the American Library Association, Beta Phi Mu, New York Library Association, Special Libraries Association, and the American Society for Information Science. A graduate of Brooklyn College, Garoogian received her MLS degree from the Pratt Institute's Graduate School of Library and Information Science in June 1973 and earned an Advanced Certificate in June 1975. She is now working on her dissertation in the Ph.D. program of the School of Communication, Information and Library Studies at Rutgers University.

JEANNE SOHN has been named director of library services for the Elihu Burritt Library at Central Connecticut State University, New Britain. She completed undergraduate study at Temple University, Philadelphia, and holds the MLS from Drexel University. Sohn, who has nearly 20 years of professional experience in the library setting, was previously associate dean of library services at the University of New Mexico, Albuquerque, where she also had been assistant dean for collection development. At Temple University, she had been chief of collection development, literature and communications bibliographer, and assistant to the curator of the rare book department. She has given formal presentations at professional conferences throughout the country on several topics including library acquisitions and development. Her library activities at the University of New Mexico included serving on the Senate Graduate Committee, the Academic Affairs Administrative Assembly, and the Centennial Showcase Committee. Sohn, who has served on the editorial board of Collection Management since 1984, is a member of several professional organizations including Beta Phi Mu, the American Library Association, the New Mexico Library Association and the New Mexico Council of Academic Libraries.

People in the news

EVEN FABER, Earlham College librarian, has received an honorary degree of Doctor of Humane Letters from Susquehanna University in Pennsylvania in acknowledgement of his contributions to higher education. Farber is recognized nationally as a bibliographic program builder and advocate for integrating campus libraries into the undergraduate curriculum. At Earlham, and at many colleges and universities that have adopted his model, students are taught how to use the rich and increasingly technological resources of the library. An unflagging proponent of bibliographic instruction, Farber is a much-sought advisor to schools interested in magnifying the role of their libraries. He gives, or hosts, several workshops annually for college librarians and academic officers across the country. Farber received an honorary doctorate from St. Lawrence University in New York in 1980. He is past president of the Association of College and Research Libraries and in 1981 received the Miriam Dudley Award as Librarian of the Year. In 1987 Earlham College received a special certificate from then Secretary of Education William Bennett for the school's outstanding bibliographic instruction program. A native of New York City, Farber earned bachelor's and master's degrees (in library science and political science respectively) from the University of North Carolina. Farber had several years' association with the Emory University Library, before becoming head librarian at Earlham in 1962.

JOANNE M. PERRY, assistant professor and map librarian at Kerr Library, has been named editor of the Special Libraries Association, Geography & Map Division's Bulletin. The Bulletin was first published in November 1947 as a four-page, biannual and has grown into an international quarterly which has a circulation of nearly 900.

JEAN PORTER, head of the Documents Department of the North Carolina State University Libraries since 1980, has been named the fifth fellow in the national Patent Depository Library (PDL) Fellowship Program. Porter will spend a year in Washington as Fellowship Librarian. During her stay in Washington she will assist Carole A. Shores, director of the Office of Patent Depository Library Programs of the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office, in increasing the distribution and use of the technical information contained in patents. Porter's specific activities will include developing outreach activities to PDLs, providing input to the development of CD-ROM (compact disc, read-only memory) products, acting as liaison between PDL representatives and the Washington office, supporting the office's daily operations, and planning and conducting workshops for patent information users. Porter served as assistant documents librarian at NCSU for six years before becoming head of the Documents Department in 1986. From 1974 to 1983 she also was supervisor of the Southern Water Resources Scientific Information Center, an online searching service. Porter is a member of many professional library groups and was 1986–87 president of the North Carolina chapter of the Special Library Association. She earned undergraduate and library science degrees from the University of Wisconsin-Madison.
EDWARD STEINHART, of the Texas Tech University Department of History, has been awarded the first Gloria Lyerla Library Memorial Fund Research Travel Grant by the Texas Tech University Library. The grant, $500, was awarded to Steinhart to assist in travel to the Public Record Office in London, England. Steinhart’s research is on the social history of hunting in Kenya. The Gloria Lyerla Library Memorial Fund was established by friends and family to assist Texas Tech University researchers with meeting the costs of travel to research collections of libraries, archives, museums, or other repositories throughout the world.

MARGARET STEEG, professor in the Graduate School of Library Service at the University of Alabama, has been named the first recipient of the Fraenkel prize in contemporary history. The prize is for an outstanding work in the field of contemporary history written either in English, French, or German, covering one of the traditional fields of interest to the Wiener Library, which funds the award. The Wiener Library was founded in 1939 and contains documents on Nazism, Fascism, anti-Semitism, racialism, and refugee and minority problems. Steig’s book, Public Libraries in Nazi Germany, is the result of painstaking research over a number of years, including lengthy visits to Germany. The Fraenkel prize carries with it a cash award of $7,500.

ROSALIND WALCOTT, librarian at the Earth and Space Sciences Library at the State University of New York (SUNY) at Stony Brook, was the winner of the fourth annual Geoscience Information Society (GIS) award for the best paper in geoscience information. Walcott’s article, “Geoscience Dissertations for the Future: A Case Study from the United States,” focuses on the importance of dissertations to the geoscience community and the need for improvement in the ways dissertations are processed and disseminated. Published in the Proceedings of the Geoscience Information Society, the article summarizes the findings in her forthcoming dissertation on the sources of information that geoscience doctoral students use in preparing their dissertations and how those sources differ from those cited by professional geoscientists. Walcott’s article offers seven suggestions for improving dissertation collections, including better cataloguing, better circulation of dissertations among libraries, and better and more timely indexing by GeoRef and University Microfilms International. Her article was selected by a seven-person committee of librarians and editors who reviewed more than 100 geoscience-information-related articles published in 1988.

Deaths

LODA MAE DAVIS, the first dean of women at the University of California, Riverside died August 25, 1989, at Riverside Community Hospital. She was 92 years old. Davis became founding dean of women and assistant professor of psychology in 1953. She retired in 1964. As dean of women she was responsible for a number of innovative steps. These included ending evening curfews for women students living in residence halls and lobbying for admission of women to the then all-male faculty club. After retirement Davis retained an active involvement at the university. The Loda Mae Davis Archives were established at the Rivera Library to document successful women in academia. An oral history and video documentary were completed two years ago. Many of her papers are included in the library's special collections.
