and was a member of several honor societies including Phi Beta Kappa and Beta Phi Mu.

Gloria Lyerla, head of interlibrary loan at Texas Tech University, Lubbock, died suddenly December 15, 1986. Lyerla’s career at Texas Tech spanned more than 30 years. She served as reserve, periodicals, and reference librarian before assuming her position in Interlibrary Loan in 1973, and was instrumental in establishing interlibrary loan services in the Southwest region.

Kate McKay, copyright reference librarian at the New York University Law Library, New York City, since 1978, died October 11, 1986. McKay was a longtime member of the American Association of Law Libraries and served on its Copyright Committee.

Toshio Sasaki, professor at the University of Library and Information Science in Tsukuba, Japan, died November 7, 1986, at the age of 62. The doyen of Japanese agricultural librarians, Sasaki was chosen in 1961–62 to study at the School of Library Service at Columbia University. Returning to Japan, he developed new library services at the University of Tokyo, remaining as associate librarian (in Japanese terms the head librarian) for 20 years, during which he introduced modern library methods and services to faculty and students. He assumed his position in Tsukuba in 1983. Together with a few leaders in the field of Japanese agricultural libraries, Sasaki founded the Japan Association of Agricultural Librarians and Documentalists (JAALD) in 1966 and had served on its board of directors since that time, becoming vice president in 1980.

Muriel Spaulding, a former librarian at the University of California, Davis, died December 1, 1986. Spaulding came to UC-Davis in 1949 following service in World War II and was a catalog librarian, serving briefly as head of the Catalog Department. From 1950 to 1960 she worked in the Reference Department before returning to the Catalog Department. Spaulding retired in 1971.

Marjorie Stone, retired librarian-bibliographer in the former Grey Herbarium of Harvard University, died August 19, 1986. Stone came to Harvard in 1931 as bibliographer of the Gray Card Index, the index to new names and new combinations of vascular plants native to the New World. In 1950–51 she became librarian, retiring in 1954, the year the Grey Herbarium and Arnold Arboretum libraries were combined.

THE DIARIES OF
DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER, 1953–1961

Introduction by Louis Galambos
Professor of History, The Johns Hopkins University

There is no substitute for reading Eisenhower, his letters, memoranda, and diaries. Here is the most complete compilation that can possibly become available outside of Abilene. One can hardly imagine a more indispensable source.

—Herbert Parmet
Distinguished Professor of History
The City University of New York

• In cooperation with the Dwight D. Eisenhower Library, this complete edition of the Eisenhower diaries is now being published for the first time.
• Over 28,000 pages of diary entries and supporting documents form the core source materials for any research on the Eisenhower administration.
• As the most comprehensive presidential diary series ever published, this collection is unmatched for capturing the atmosphere, the policy-making processes, and the complexities of the modern presidency.

University Publications of America is pleased to announce the publication of The Diaries of Dwight D. Eisenhower, 1953–1961, a remarkable collection of primary sources for the study of postwar American politics and foreign affairs. The Diaries of Dwight D. Eisenhower, 1953–1961 contains approximately 28,000 pages of diary entries and related conversations, White House staff memoranda, special reports, and summaries of Congressional correspondence. These diaries and supporting documents shed light on virtually every issue that concerned Eisenhower during his presidency; they also reveal much about Eisenhower’s political philosophy, as well as his private views on such matters as McCarthyism, Indochina, civil rights, strategic planning, and disarmament.

Note on Sources

The Diaries of Dwight D. Eisenhower, 1953–1961 is the microfilm edition of the Dwight D. Eisenhower Diaries series that is located at the Eisenhower Library in Abilene, Kansas. The Diaries series covers Eisenhower’s presidential years and consists of over 28,000 pages of material, arranged chronologically by month and year. UPA, in cooperation with the Eisenhower Library and John S.D. Eisenhower, has filmed the Diaries series in its entirety for this publication.

• The 10th edition of Guide to Reference Books, edited by Eugene P. Sheehy (1056 pages, October 1986), annotates more than 14,000 reference books published through 1984, with some 1985 titles included. Reference works are divided into five major sections—general reference, humanities, social sciences, history and area studies, and pure and applied sciences. Introductory material for each of the 48 subdivisions briefly describes the nature and scope of reference material available. Eugene P. Sheehy, head of the Reference Department at Columbia University, has contributed to the column "Selected Reference Sources" in College & Research Libraries for the past 20 years. Copies may be ordered for $50 from the ALA Order Department, 50 E. Huron St., Chicago, IL 60611. ISBN 0-8389-0390-8.

• Machine Writing and Typesetting, by Frank Romano (122 pages, 1986), is a history of the inventions of the typewriter by Christopher Latham Sholes and the Linotype machine by Ottmar Mergenthaler. Both machines played important roles in the early development of printed communication. The Mergenthaler Linotype, which celebrated its 100th birthday in 1986, created a revolution in publishing and education when it was introduced and allowed for fast, low-cost typesetting that facilitated the production of newspapers, magazines, and books. Copies may be obtained for $26.95 from GAMA, P.O. Box 170, Salem, NH 03079. ISBN 0-938853-00-7.

• Organization Charts in ARL Libraries, SPEC Kit #129 (104 pages, November-December 1986), reviews the charts of 86 libraries and compares them with a similar survey conducted among ARL Libraries in 1973. The report indicates that a number of libraries are moving toward rearranging reporting and working relationships to conform more closely to workflow. Individual SPEC kits cost $20 (prepayment required) and are available from SPEC, Office of Management Studies, 1527 New Hampshire Ave., N.W., Washington, DC 20036.

• Performance Contracting: Negotiating Your Systems Contract (106 pages, 1986) addresses major price and performance issues that can be negotiated when a library or other type of organization is acquiring an automated system. The report is based on the actual negotiation experience gained by the William Nieman Consulting firm in negotiations with 150 vendors in the information services field. Specific topics include: various types of contracts that may be encountered; common vendor plays; relationship of the planning, acquisition, and negotiation function; more than 25 specific contract provisions affecting price and performance. Individual copies may be purchased by libraries for $19.50 (with a discount for additional copies) from William Nieman Consulting, Suite 102, 5786 Timrick Court, Cincinnati, OH 45238.

• The Proceedings of the African Agricultural Development Conference, held May 28–June 1, 1985, at the California State Polytechnic University, Pomona, addresses the development of long-range solutions to the problems of food shortages on the African continent. More than 200 people representing 23 African countries and 37 countries worldwide participated in the conference. Presenters, participants and attendees included African government officials and scholars, American policy experts and scholars, and representatives from the international and industrial communities. The volume includes a select bibliography on women in African agriculture. Copies may be ordered for $18.50 (checks payable to the School of Arts) from: Tengemana Thumbutu, School of Arts, California State Polytechnic University, Pomona, 3801 W. Temple Ave., Pomona, CA 91768-4051.

The Tao of Programming, by Geoffrey James (151 pages, 1986), will appeal to both end-users and programmers with a yen for Zen. Written in the style of parables and master/student questions and answers, this satire provides a refreshing break from hours of reading system documentation. One of my favorites: "Thus spake the master programmer: 'When the program is being tested, it is too late to make design changes.'" The cost is $7.98 from Info Books, P.O. Box 1018, Santa Monica, CA 90406. ISBN 0-931137-07-1.

The Western Jewish History Center: Guide to Archival and Oral History Collections, by Ruth Kelson Rafael (1987), contains annotated entries for the 300 archival collections and 95 oral histories in the Center, located in the Judah L. Magnes Museum in Berkeley. The culmination of a two-year project based on an NEH grant, the sourcebook is illustrated with 40 photographs from the Center's extensive archives and contains both name and subject indexes. Each archival description includes historical background and detailed notes on items of particular importance to researchers concerned with Jewish life in the American West. Copies are priced at $24.95 and may be ordered from the Judah L. Magnes Museum, 2911 Russell St., Berkeley, CA 94705.
