ACQUISITIONS

- The University of Notre Dame and the Divinity School of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Philadelphia announce the purchase, by the university, of books and bound periodicals from the William Bacon Stevens Library of the Divinity School.

Approximately 20,500 titles in about 29,500 physical volumes are involved in the transaction, which will enhance the University of Notre Dame’s holdings in such areas as American Protestantism, Anglicanism, church history, ecumenism, and liturgies. This acquisition will bring Notre Dame’s holdings in religion and church history to approximately 130,000 volumes, and represents the largest single increase in the university’s religion collection in recent years.

The sale of the books by the Divinity School was prompted by the merger of the Philadelphia institution with another seminary of the Episcopal Church, the Episcopal Theological School in Cambridge, Massachusetts. The institution resulting from this merger will be located at Cambridge and will be named the Episcopal Divinity School. The approximately 30,000 volumes retained by the Divinity School and to be moved to Cambridge will provide a greatly strengthened library resource for Episcopal theological education in Cambridge as well as contribute to the area library resources of the Boston Theological Institute.

The books from Philadelphia destined for both Notre Dame and Cambridge will be cataloged into the collections at their new locations and in due time will be reported as holdings in the appropriate regional union catalogs.

- The American Antiquarian Society has acquired a rare collection of 134 of the earliest laws of the United States enacted by the first four congresses between 1790 and 1796. Acquisition of these documents was made possible by a gift of $6,800 from the First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Worcester.

In 1789, individual laws were first printed immediately upon enactment: one copy each for the president, the secretary of state, each senator and representative, and two for each state. Additional copies were printed later for distribution to state officials and government agencies, so that the total printing for an important law might run as high as 300 to 400 copies. These slip laws were not intended for public dissemination and government officials seldom filed them for long. They were rare even one hundred years ago and are even more so today.

The laws in this collection fall within the period 1790 to 1796. Of the First Congress, second session, the collection consists of about half the laws passed; of the Second Congress, first session, about three quarters; of the Third Congress, both sessions, virtually complete; and of the Fourth Congress, first session, nearly complete. All these acts of Congress were printed by Childs and Swaine, first in New York and later in Philadelphia when the government moved there in 1791. In all but a very few cases the laws are in surprisingly good condition. Most of them were never bound and all are uncut, just as issued.

Examples of some of the most significant of these laws: the first American copyright law (May 31, 1790); Hamilton’s act providing for the debt of the United States (August 4, 1790); an act to regulate trade and intercourse with Indian tribes (July 22, 1790); the first law establishing a uniform rule for naturalization (March 26, 1790); the act authorizing the president to call out the militia (May 2, 1792); and the act establishing a federal mint and regulating coins of the U.S. (April 2, 1792).

- With the receipt of the original illustrations and manuscripts for Edwin Tunis’ last book, Tavern at the Ferry, the University of Oregon Library is pleased to announce that the entire working collection of this outstanding American author and illustrator of books for children and adults is now available for research. The collection is a bequest of the late Mr. Tunis, who died in August of 1973. Tunis was one of those rare authors and illustrators who saved all his notes, sketches, and working files in addition to the finished drawings for the book illustrations and the final publisher’s manuscripts for eleven books, his entire output. The collection includes about 2,085 original drawings plus the working material for each book and was organized and inventoried by Nancy Farmer of the library staff.

- New collections in the Urban Archives Center of Temple University include local records of the Big Brother Association (1915-1970), Citizen’s Committee on Public Education (including the Public Education Association) (1907-1967), Pennsylvania Child Labor Association (1905-1915), Defender Association (1968-1974), A Modern Constitution for Pennsylvania, Inc. (1965-1968), Citizen’s Council of Montgomery County (1965-1968), and Penn-Jersey Transportation Study (1958–1965). The last collection includes the complete raw data from the massive surveys and home interview series done in 1960. The Archives also acquired scrapbooks of local political figures H. W. Salus, Sr. (1924–1930) and R. W. Pitman (1945–1949), and early records of the Philadelphia local of the American Federation of Teachers (1934–1941). Major additions to existing collections include case records and office files of the Philadelphia American Civil Liberties Union (1950–1970) and bound minutes and ledgers of the local YMCA (1854–1939).

- The Loyola-Notre Dame Library in Baltimore has announced the opening of a permanent exhibition of some 300 rare fore-edge paintings donated to the institution by Marion and Henry J. Knott of Baltimore.

The collection of volumes, most of which date back to the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, is one of the largest of its kind in the country and features the fore-edge art which has all but disappeared from bookbinding today. Fore-edge painting is done, usually in watercolors, on the inner edges of a book while the pages are fanned open. When the book is closed, the painting is invisible under the decorated gilt edges.

Valued in excess of $150,000, the Knott collection is the largest of the special collections housed in the library which serves the Charles Street campuses of Loyola and Notre Dame of Maryland. Owing to the fine care and concern of Mr. Knott, the books remain in excellent condition and are doubly valuable for their fine bindings, most all of which are in leather.

A number of the Knott books contain up to six paintings on their edges, and the painted scenes depict landscapes, religious scenes, seascapes, sports, or messages. The newest book in the collection, painted in 1953, depicts the corona coach of Elizabeth II leaving Buckingham Palace, while one of the oldest, dating back to 1556, bears a portrait of Erasmus.

- The Navy is lending Texas A&M University's Library and Oceanography Department a $250,000 data storage and retrieval system which will serve as the nucleus for a project to cope with the “information explosion” in marine-related fields. In addition to serving TAMU's own oceanographers and other researchers interested in marine data, the system—dubbed "File-Search"—will be available to qualified representatives of other institutions, government, and industry.

The new system stores the data from scientific books or journals in its memory drum. “File-Search” is capable of accommodating an unlimited number of reels of film, with each reel containing 32,000 pages of data. Each page of data is coded according to content. The machine can search its memory for materials on any of thousands of specific oceanographic topics. The system is expected to be operational in the library during the fall semester.

In making the equipment available, Rear Admiral J. Edward Snyder, Jr., oceanographer of the Navy, said he viewed the loan as a continuation of the long and fruitful cooperation between the Navy and TAMU in working toward common goals in ocean research and development programs. TAMU's Oceanography Department has received approximately $1.1 million from the Navy this year in support of its research programs and ship operations.

- The National Endowment for the Arts has awarded a grant to the FILM AND TELEVISION STUDY CENTER OF SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA to compile a union catalog of motion picture and television manuscript and special collections throughout the eleven western states.

The Study Center is a consortium of USC, UCLA, Loyola, the Motion Picture Academy, the AFI, Cal Arts, LA County Museum of Art, Television Academy, and FILMEX. The grant will make possible for the first time data on all film and television manuscript and other collections in California, Oregon, Washington, Utah, Colorado, Nevada, Montana, Wyoming, New Mexico, Idaho, and Arizona. By means of this union catalog a film student or historian will be able to determine easily where his source materials are located, if they are within the purview of this catalog, without lengthy preliminary investigation. It will also establish precisely what source materials are now held in this area.

Anne G. Schlosser, librarian at the AFI's Charles K. Feldman Library and vice-chairman of the Study Center, will be project director for the catalog and Linda Harris Mehr will be bibliographer.

- The Heinrich H. Fick Collection of German-American has been established in the Special Collections Department of the University of Cincinnati Library. It is one of the largest collections of German-American prose and poetry in the U.S. The library acquired the collection from Dr. Fick in the 1930s. Fick was the editor of several German-American journals and a well-known German-language poet. His book collection contains most of the Cincinnati German imprints and many rare German-American books such as the first anthology of German-American poetry, Deutsch-Amerikanischer Dichterwald (Detroit, 1856). Also in the collection are the unpublished autobiographical and literary manuscripts of several German-American poets. One scrapbook contains the autographs and pictures of hundreds of German-American authors. The checklist of the collection was published in German-American Studies (1969-70). An exhibition of these rare materials will coincide with a symposium at the University of Cincinnati in 1975 on Emigrant Literature.

Don H. Tolzmann, reference librarian and bibliographer in Germanic languages and literature, has assembled and organized the Fick Collection. Mr. Tolzmann has compiled some bibliographies from this collection of Cincinnati German imprints and they are available on request.

- The British Library Board has appointed Mr. Maurice Line as director general of its Lending Division at Boston Spa near Wetherby in Yorkshire. Mr. Line has also been appointed by the secretary of state for education and science as a full-time member of the Board.

Mr. Line served in Glasgow, Southampton, and Newcastle university libraries on his way to Bath, where he was the university librarian from 1968 to 1971. He then became librarian of the National Central Library. When this library was incorporated into the British Library's Lending Division in 1973 he moved with it to Yorkshire, becoming deputy director general under Dr. D. J. Urquhart, who now retires.

Mr. Line was a member of the committee set up in the planning stages of the British Library (the British Library Organising Committee), and is a member of the Aslib Council, the Library Association Council, and the Library Advisory Council (England). He has a particular interest in user surveys, reader instruction, and automation and information services, and has published numerous papers on these and other subjects. He is the author of three books.

On its formation in July 1973, the British Library acquired the library departments of the
This book fills a serious information gap by providing sketches of over 500 men and women who have had a substantial impact on the American labor movement. Although the emphasis is historical, a number of the leaders of the contemporary labor movement are represented.

Each biographical sketch contains not only such basic information as time and place of birth and death, marital status, and educational achievement, but also information on ethnic background and religious affiliation, political party preference, major union positions held, and important contributions to the labor movement. Bibliographical references are given for each subject. A variety of useful appendices as well as a general subject index are provided.

The Dictionary is part of Greenwood's ongoing effort to provide significant original reference tools for the social sciences.

PUBLICATIONS

- The Library of Congress has recently published To Set a Country Free, an account derived from an exhibition commemorating the Bicentennial of American Independence which is scheduled to open at the Library of Congress on April 24, 1975. That day will mark the occasion of the 175th anniversary of the establishment of the Library of Congress, which the Sixth Congress created on April 24, 1800, with legislation containing authorization “for the purchase of such books as may be necessary for the use of Congress . . . and for fitting up a suitable apartment for containing them.”

  The seventy-four-page softcover booklet on the history of the American Revolution contains more than one hundred rich illustrations, eight in full color, selected from the library’s Geography and Map, Manuscript, Prints and Photographs, and Rare Book divisions. To Set a Country Free is part of the library’s continuing series of publications designed to further the public’s acquaintance with both the story of the Revolution and the library’s extensive holdings in Americana. The title is taken from Thomas Paine’s American Crisis: “We fight not to enslave, but to set a country free, and to make room upon the earth for honest men to live in.”

  To Set a Country Free, produced through the Verner W. Clapp Publication Fund, may be purchased for $4.50 by mail from the Library of Congress, Information Office, Washington, DC 20540.

- Available from the Columbia University Libraries is The Administrative Organization of the Libraries of Columbia University: A Detailed Description. This unit by unit definition of the functional structure of the libraries was developed by a majority of the libraries’ professional staff following a study conducted by Booz, Allen and Hamilton, Inc. and the Library Management Studies Office of the Association of Research Libraries. The primary objective of the study was to provide an organization which would respond more effectively to the changing university and library service environment. Each unit has been defined in terms of its objectives, functional responsibilities, reporting and working relationships, and performance criteria. The resulting unit definitions afford a documentary base for the periodic examination of goals, evaluation of progress or activity relative to those goals, and adjustment of resources as conditions or objectives change. Copies of the volume may be ordered from Mr. Alfred Lane, Columbia University Libraries, 535 W. 114th St., New York, NY 10027. The price is $5.00.

  The report of the original study is recommended for the best understanding of the detailed descriptions. It is entitled Organization and Staffing of the Libraries of Columbia University: A Case Study, and has been published by Redgrave Information Resources Corp., 53 Wilton Rd., Westport, CT 06880.

Here at last is a single source of subject, author, and title access to 51 years of Parliamentary and Non-Parliamentary British Government publications, the unique new CUMULATIVE INDEX TO HMSO CATALOGUES OF PUBLICATIONS, 1922–1972.

This new 2 volume single-alphabet index set eliminates these 24 separate search steps which were formerly necessary to trace any subject through existing indexes to British Government documents published during this period:

14 Annual Catalogues 1922-1935
7 Quinquennial "Consolidated Indexes" 1936-1970
3 Annual Catalogues, 1971-1972

More than 200,000 subject and author entries were accumulated from these annual and quinquennial indexes and merged into this one single alphabet set.

Subject entries are arranged hierarchially and each author, subject or title entry refers to the year and page where its full description appears in the Annual Catalogue. The year always appears as a two digit number in parentheses, followed by a page number [e.g. "(70) 1657"]. These year and page numbers can be used either to locate the full description of the publication in the Annual Catalogues themselves, or as the initial access number to the retrieval system of the microfilm collection.

Index entries referring to such documents as Command Papers, House of Lords and House of Commons Bills and Reports, all include serial numbers as well as Catalogue page numbers.

The Cumulative Index to HMSO Catalogues of Publications 1922–1972, in two hard-cover volumes. Postpaid $165.00

REPRODUCTIONS OF HMSO ANNUAL CATALOGUES, 1922-1972

The Cumulative Index to HMSO Catalogues of Publications, 1922-1972 may be purchased either by itself, as a part of the Controller's Library microfilm system, or as a combined reference edition including reproductions of the 51 Annual Catalogues themselves. These editions have been announced as available either on 35 mm or 16 mm microfilm, in reduced "compact" editions, or in full-size facsimile reprint volumes.

Available from us for immediate delivery are the full texts of 51 HMSO Annual Catalogues on 6 reels of 35 mm or 16 mm silver halide microfilm. Postpaid $118.50
As the Cumulative Index entries refer to the year and page numbers of the HMSO Annual Catalogue issues in which the publications are described; and whereas all the publications in the Controller's Library collection appear on the microfilm in the same order they appear in the Annual Catalogues, the Cumulative Index can be used for direct access to the microfilm collection.

Publications in this collection are being offered initially in sets, either annually or in multi-annual groupings. The per year and estimated delivery dates are presented in the table included with each of the sub-sets listed.

ON MICROFILM

The 12 million page collection of the Controller's Library will be contained on more than 4000 reels of 35 mm microfilm, and can be purchased either as a complete set or in a variety of sub-sets. For instance, microfilm sets of Parliamentary or Non-Parliamentary publications may be purchased separately, either for complete runs or for individual years.

ARRANGEMENT AND ACCESS

The microfilm collection is arranged in the same sequence as the HMSO Annual Catalogues, and all references to it from the Cumulative Index are by Catalogue year and Catalogue page number [e.g., "(70) 1655"].

In order that the reader can go directly from the index entry to the microfilm (without referring to the Catalogues), an image of each Catalogue page has been reproduced on the microfilm and each publication listed on it has been assigned an "Item Number" relative to its position from the top [e.g. "(70) 1657-5"].

To assist the reader in finding the Catalogue page and the title page of the referenced document on microfilm, we have incorporated two search features into the retrieval system; namely a "Catalogue-Page-Scale" and "Item Number Inserts", each of which appears between every other microfilm frame.

Therefore, once a reference has been selected from the Cumulative Index, the reader can:

1. go directly to the microfilm carton which is clearly marked with the year and Catalogue page numbers,
2. locate the Catalogue page on film by matching the Catalogue-Page-Scale pattern on the moving film to the Catalogue-Page-Scale pattern on the microfilm carton,
3. identify the Item Number from the Catalogue page on microfilm, and
4. search the "Item Number Inserts" sequentially until one of the proper inserts (showing the referenced Item Number) is located, at which time the reader can use the document's own page numbers to rewind to its title page.

Alternatively, the reader can go to the years and pages of the HMSO Catalogues themselves to select references from their detailed descriptions (and incidentally, identify the Item Numbers) before referring to the microfilm.
The library of the Institute has been undergoing initial development over the last five years towards a tertiary standard library. Its use and the expenditure on resources within it have now increased to the extent where new procedures and services need to be developed to allow it to function effectively as a large tertiary EDUCATION RESOURCE CENTRE. At the same time a new Centre has first priority on the Institute’s building programme.

The Institute supports co-operation between libraries within the CAE system and close association exists with these libraries through the Victoria Institute of Colleges Chief Librarians’ Association.

The Centre currently serves a population of 1700 which is expected to grow to 4000 by 1978. Book stock is approximately 17,000 volumes, currently growing at about 6500 volumes a year. Expenditure is expected to increase substantially in the 1978-78 triennium. The Institute has recently introduced a computer based acquisitions programme and is actively investigating the extension of computer applications. Construction of the new EDUCATION RESOURCE CENTRE is expected to commence in 1976.

DUTIES:
- Under the direction of the Principal:
  - to develop the EDUCATION RESOURCE CENTRE in order to provide the widest range of resources and services for the community served;
  - to integrate the resources and services of the CENTRE as closely as possible into the educational programme of the Institute;
  - to be responsible for the continued long-term planning of the CENTRE as well as the immediate development of the new centre building.

QUALIFICATIONS:
Appropriate professional and academic qualifications are required as well as experience at senior administrative levels.

SALARY:
The appointment will be as Chief Librarian in the salary range $15,280 - $16,389 per annum. Application forms and terms and conditions of employment may be obtained from the Staffing Officer, with whom the closing date for applications will be Friday, October 11, 1974. (Reference 114).

The proceedings contain the full texts of the fifty-one papers presented at the three sections of the symposium: (1) sources of international documentation, (2) acquisition and organization of international documentation, and (3) utilization of international documentation. The proceedings furthermore contain the sixty-four recommendations, the reports of the rapporteurs of the three main sections, introductory reports, an author index, and a list of the participants with full addresses.

The publications are available from: The International Federation for Documentation, 7 Hofweg, The Hague, Netherlands.

- Volume 1, number 1 of the CaDocs Manual of U.S. Government Series, Pseudoseries and Subscriptions has recently been released. Edited by Maria Broadbent, manager of Capital Documents Service, and her husband, Marv Broadbent, who is head acquisitions librarian for the Organization of American States, the CaDocs Manual brings together under agency author the saleable publications of the U.S. government. More important is the indexing of these series four times per year on a cumulative basis. The cumulation is promised to extend for a period of five years. Since the issues are cumulative many small libraries might wish to purchase only one number per year. Single numbers are $3.00, annual subscriptions $10.50. Volume 1, number 1, however, is free from the publishers, Capital Documents Service, 4410 Josephine Ave., Beltsville, MD 20705.

News From the Sections

ART SECTION

The ACRL Art Section meetings were held in conjunction with ALA New York Conference meetings, beginning July 7, 1974. The conference opened with a business meeting on Sunday, which included reports on the current ACRL meeting, preliminary plans for the 1975 San Francisco Conference, and a description of the Bicentennial Bibliography project of the Archives of American Art by Bernard Karpel, editor and coordinator of the project.

On Monday the Art Section toured the Cloisters Museum and participated in an informal session on library resources with Kate Chipman, librarian at the Cloisters Museum. Tuesday's activities included a tour and lecture at the auction house of Parke-Bernet, followed by an examination of the Parke-Bernet library. Evening activities included an open house hosted by ARLIS/NY at the American Crafts Council, followed by informal dinner arrangements and museum touring. Wednesday included the evening reception for ACRL members at the Elmer Holmes Bobst Library.

The executive committee met for breakfast Thursday morning, at which time plans were discussed for the 1975 San Francisco meeting. From ten o'clock until twelve noon the Art Section met at the Frick Collection with the curatorial staff, followed by a lecture on the collection and its development. During the remaining time Art Section members viewed the collection. The overall turnout for meetings was good, and the tours, arranged by Ms. Barbara Sevy, were particularly appreciated by the membership.

COLLEGE LIBRARIES SECTION

At the Las Vegas Conference, the executive board of the College Libraries Section, ACRL, voted that an ad hoc committee be established "to reexamine the Section's position vis-a-vis ACRL and ALA [and] to clearly state goals and objectives recognizing the fundamentally unique needs of college libraries as distinct from junior college and university libraries. . . ." Since that time the committee has held meetings at Midwinter 1974 and at the Annual Conference in July 1974.
