

of African Studies, Evanston, Illinois, has received a $150,000 grant from the Lloyd A. Fry Foundation. The grant will support a preservation program aimed at ensuring the longevity and useful materials in Africana. A full-time conservation assistant will be hired to carry out the in-house repair of 400 rare books, coordinate a survey of the general Africana collection, and microfilm rare books and additional items requiring this treatment.

News notes

• Queens College, New York, laid the cornerstone on April 22 for a new library building named after Benjamin Rosenthal, the late Congressman from Queens who served ten full terms in the House. The Rosenthal Library will be completed in 1987 and will house a Regional Archives and Public Policy center for the collection and study of documents relating to the business of Congress and the New York State Legislature. Benjamin Rosenthal's papers have been deposited at the College and negotiations are now underway with major state and federal figures to give the library their public papers.

• The University of Chicago libraries were the subject of three articles in the Winter 1985 issue of the University of Chicago Magazine. The first two describe the collections and services at the new John Crerar Science Library and Chicago's main facility, the Joseph Regenstein Library. Perhaps of greatest interest is the the third article in the series, "What Research Will Be 'Hot' in 2084?", which gives an excellent description of the work of the subject bibliographers, mostly in their own words.

• The University of Michigan libraries were similarly profiled in the University's Research News for July–September 1984. Produced at the instigation of the vice president for academic affairs, this special issue highlights many of the library services at the University of Michigan. Emphasizing access over immediate availability, each section of the issue features a book that for some reason was not in its proper location in the stacks and goes on to explain the work of the library department that could help a puzzled patron find it. In this way the library's acquisitions, cataloging, circulation, inter-library loan, storage facility, online search service, and preservation units were profiled. ■■

Profiles

VIRGINIA M. BOWDEN has been named library director of the Dolph Briscoe Library of the University of Texas Health Science Center at San Antonio, effective March 8. Bowden joined the Briscoe Library in 1970 as a library systems analyst and has worked in various capacities there including serving as associate library director from 1978 and as acting director since September 1984.

Bowden received a bachelor's degree from the University of Texas at Austin in 1960 and worked as a computer programmer before receiving an MLS from the University of Kentucky in 1970. She received a Council on Library Resources fellowship in 1978 for a comparative analysis of current monograph acquisitions, and was principal investigator of a 1982–1983 National Library of Medicine grant to evaluate the impact of the TALON Cooperative Acquisitions Program. In 1984 she received a grant from the Council on Library Resources to investigate nursing collections in the Southwest.

A member of both ALA and the Medical Library

Association, Bowden served as president of MLA's South Central Regional Group in 1979–1980. She is treasurer of the Council of Research and Academic Libraries and a member of the Board of Directors of the San Antonio Public Library Foundation.

SUSAN ULRICH GOLDEN has been appointed assistant director of libraries for technical services at the University of Delaware, Newark.

Golden received her bachelor's degree in Spanish from Marietta College, Ohio. She holds an MLS from the University of Kentucky and a master's degree in linguistics from the University of Illinois, Urbana.

Golden comes to Delaware from the University of Illinois where she held the position of assistant director of general services for automated systems. She currently is ACRL representative on the LC Cataloging in Publication Advisory Group and was vice-president/president-elect of the ACRL Illinois Chapter.

Office of Preservation established

The National Endowment for the Humanities has established an Office of Preservation to provide national leadership and grant support for efforts to preserve rapidly deteriorating research materials. The announcement was made March 27 by NEH acting chairman John Agresto, who called for a national partnership of government and the private sector "to halt the deterioration of our irreplaceable research materials in the humanities."

The new office will support grants for problem solving, humanities documentation, cooperative efforts, the preparation of informational materials, institutional preservation needs, and research and development. Formal guidelines, including application forms, are available from NEH. The first deadline for grant applications is June 1, 1985; a second annual deadline of December 1, 1985, is anticipated. Potential applicants should first contact the Office of Preservation for further information on eligibility and the preparation of a proposal.

Over $900,000 in grants to six national humanities organizations were also announced. The recipient institutions are:

- The Research Libraries Group, which will receive $625,011 for the second phase of a project to preserve on microfilm approximately 45,000 titles, including books and periodicals published between 1870 and 1920, essential to the study of American history and literature. Five institutions that participated in the project's first phase, funded by NEH in 1983, will continue their participation in phase two. These institutions are Columbia University, New York Public Library, University of Michigan, University of Minnesota, and Yale University. New participants will be Cornell University, New York Historical Society, Princeton University, and Stanford University.

- The Northeast Document Conservation Center will receive $27,000 for a conference on regional conservation centers to be held in Andover, Massachusetts, in the fall of 1985.

- The University of Delaware, Newark, will receive $49,181 to fund that state's participation in the NEH-supported U.S. Newspaper Program, which aims to catalog over 300,000 newspaper titles and preserve a significant portion of them.

For further information, contact the Office of Preservation, National Endowment for the Humanities, Room 802, 1100 Pennsylvania Avenue, N.W., Washington, DC 20506; (202) 786-0570. ■■

New ACRL journal

The Association of College & Research Libraries will soon be publishing a new journal devoted to special collections, Rare Books and Manuscripts Librarianship. Each issue will contain three or four articles totaling approximately 30 pages, 10 pages of book reviews and books received, and two to three pages of news notes. The emphasis will be on the theory and practice of special collections librarianship.

Among the topics to be included are: acquisition and collection development of rare books and manuscripts; security, access and use of special collections; conservation; cataloging of special materials; computer applications; fund raising, donor relations and friends groups; exhibits; and the historical development of various special collections.

Two trial issues of the journal will be published in 1985-86. Articles to be included in the second issue, scheduled for June 1986, should be submitted no later than December 2, 1985, to the Editorial Board, c/o Ann Gwyn, Editor, RBML, Milton S. Eisenhower Library, Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, MD 21218.

Information about subscriptions may be obtained from Sandy Whiteley, ACRL, 50 E. Huron St., Chicago, IL 60611-2795. ■■

HOW TO READ THE JAPANESE.

It's actually quite simple. You can acquire the most current, vital findings of Japanese research—in a way that's far easier than reading them in Japanese.

Because now there's the Japanese Technical Information Service, and it's available from UMI, a Xerox information company.

When your organization subscribes to JTIS, you receive monthly abstracts in English from more than 750 Japanese publications. All areas of applied technology and business in which Japan is prominent are covered, including microelectronics, computer technology, biotechnology, aerospace engineering, quality control, business management, finance, ceramics, defense, and more.

Now you can finally learn about the latest Japanese advances in technology and business—without spending years learning how to read Japanese.

RBMS Exhibition Catalogue Awards

Three annual awards for the best catalogue published by American or Canadian institutions in conjunction with exhibitions of books and/or manuscripts will be granted for the first time in the Spring of 1986. Catalogues published between January 1, 1983, and August 31, 1985, are eligible and must be submitted by September 30, 1985, to the ACRL Rare Books and Manuscripts Section's Committee for Awards for Exhibition Catalogues.

The entries will be divided into three budget categories: expensive, moderately expensive, and inexpensive, based upon the production costs of the catalogue, thereby allowing institutions of similar publishing resources to compete within the same category.

Catalogues may be of varying formats, styles, and scope, but each must represent, either comprehensively or selectively, an exhibition which has taken place. Criteria for selecting the winners will include the level of accuracy and consistency of presentation in the catalogue, its clarity, quality of design and usefulness to the intended audience. The awards will take the form of printed citations to the institutions organizing the exhibitions.

For further information and entry forms, contact Sally Leach, Chair of the RBMS Committee for Awards for Exhibition Catalogues, Harry Ransom Humanities Research Center, P.O. Drawer 7219, Austin, TX 78713. ■■
