Volunteer to serve on a division or section committee

A CRL division and section committee volunteers are an integral part of the association and drive our success. Committee members help shape the organization by implementing its strategic plan (available at www.acrl.org, click on “About ACRL,” then “What is ACRL?”), reshaping the association, and influencing the direction of academic and research librarianship.

If you have been looking for a way to become more involved with ACRL, consider volunteering for a division or section committee. Vice president Camila Alire invites all ACRL members to contact the Appointments Committee about serving on one of ACRL’s 23 committees for next year. Members may also contact one of the section vice chairs regarding service on one of the many section committees.

The benefits of volunteering
Volunteers not only give to the association, they get back from the association. As an ACRL division or section committee member, you will:

• build ties with academic and research librarians around the country,
• enhance your leadership abilities through consensus building and persuasion,
• share your expertise with colleagues, and
• gain additional expertise by learning more about a new area of academic librarianship or picking up new ideas for your current area.

The appointment process
Appointments are made at both the section and division levels. The ACRL vice president is responsible for the committee appointments at the division level for the year he or she serves as president. Likewise, section vice chairs are responsible for committee appointments in their respective sections the year they serve as chair. Committee slates are usually completed shortly after the Midwinter Meeting during the year in which the individual serves as president-elect or chair-elect. The ACRL Appointments Committee assists the president-elect in this process in an advisory capacity.

Factors influencing appointment
Although the emphasis in the appointment process may vary from year to year according to the prerogatives of the president-elect and section chairs, the same factors are considered. They include:

• Evidence of potential committee member’s interest. Have you attended the meetings and introduced yourself to the chair? Do you have previous experience that relates to the work of the committee? Have you indicated your interest on the volunteer form?

• Demographics and composition of committee. A balance is sought with respect to type of library (community college, college, or university), geographic representation, ethnic diversity, and gender. Those who have not had the opportunity to serve on an ACRL committee are encouraged to volunteer.

• Recommendation of the current committee chair. Current committee chairs are asked to suggest potential members.

Although all of these factors are considered, the final appointments are the prerogative of the ACRL president-elect and the section chair-elects.
How to apply

1. Select the committees that interest you.
   A list of ACRL committees and their charges is available on the ACRL Web site (www.al.org/acrl, click on “About ACRL” then “Committees, Task Forces, and Discussion Groups”). Attend the committee’s meetings at the Midwinter Meeting and Annual Conference to help you decide if those are the activities that interest you.

2. Submit a volunteer form. Complete the volunteer form included with this article. (This form is also available on ACRL’s Web site, go to www.acrl.org and select “Forms” from the Quicklinks drop down menu.)
   Be sure to cover all of the items asked for in the background information section of the form. If you have attended committee meetings or programs, mention that. Fill out one form for ACRL division committees and a different form for each ACRL section committee you volunteer to serve on.

   Send the ACRL committee volunteer form to Janet D. Simmons-Welburn at the address on the bottom of the volunteer form; send the section volunteer forms to the appropriate section chair-elects (see list of addresses below).

3. Introduce yourself. Talk with committee members. Express your interest to the committee chair. Explain how you might contribute to the work of the committee.

4. Volunteer again . . . and again. If you are not successful in being appointed one year, volunteer again the next year . . . and the next.
   Remember that a multitude of factors—number of appointments made, number of volunteers for each committee, number of volunteers from your type of library or your geographic area—determine the actual appointment, and these factors change from year to year.

ACRL divisional committee appointments

ACRL has 23 standing committees to which appointments may be made for 2004–2005. A list appears on the volunteer form at the end of this article. You will also find the committees listed along with their charges on the ACRL Web site (www.al.org/acrl/, click on “About ACRL,” then “Committees, Task Forces, and Discussion Groups”).

Appointments to ACRL standing committees are made in the spring for terms beginning immediately after the ALA Annual Conference. The Appointments Committee recommends to the president-elect of ACRL the names of members who might fill the vacancies. The president-elect makes the final appointments.

If you want to be considered for an appointment to an ACRL committee, complete the form and return it to Janice D. Simmons-Welburn at the address given on the form before December 3, 2004.

ACRL section appointments

ACRL has 17 sections (listed below). You will find a description of their areas of responsibility in the ALA Handbook of Organization, 2004–05.

The chair-elect of each section appoints the chair and members of all section committees. Most of these appointments are made in the spring for terms beginning immediately after the ALA Annual Conference.

If you would like to be considered for appointment as a chair or member of a section committee, fill out the ACRL Section Committee Volunteer Form and mail it to the chair-elect of the appropriate section listed below before December 3, 2004.

Editorial boards

Appointments to editorial boards are made at the Midwinter Meeting for terms that begin immediately after the ALA Annual Conference. The editors recommend the name of a person to fill a vacancy. The Publications Committee must approve the recommendation, and the president of ACRL makes the appointment.

If you would like to be considered for appointment to an editorial board, contact the editor of the editorial board early in the fall.

CHOICE editor: Irving Rockwood, Choice, 100 Riverview Center, Middletown, CT 06457; e-mail: irockwood@ala-choice.org.
ACRL is offering four workshops at the ALA Midwinter Meeting in Boston, Massachusetts, on Friday, January 14, 2005. Advance registration is available through December 10. More details about these workshops can be found online at www.acrl.org in the “Events and Conferences” section.

Assessment in Higher Education: Applying the New ACRL Standards
Discover how to apply the 2004 ACRL “Standards for libraries in higher education” as a framework for evaluating your academic library. Learn about the principles of the standards and discover why the use of outcomes is necessary in the current higher education environment. Learn a range of formats and approaches for incorporating outcomes assessment into academic library assessment. Use a workbook with practical examples, forms, checklists, and tools and techniques to develop your implementation plan.

Getting Teacher/Faculty Attention for Information Literacy: New Practical Approaches
Sometimes it is hard to know how to approach faculty and teachers about information literacy instruction (ILI). They are experts in their fields. What can you say? What works? This workshop will provide you with practical ideas on how and where to start or expand faculty/teacher outreach, how to conduct syllabus reviews, and how your administrators can help. Return to your institution with practical approaches and ideas for effective faculty/teacher outreach for IIL. This workshop includes a number of interactive activities; individual, small, and large group work.

Reinventing Libraries for the 21st Century
This full-day workshop will introduce you to the discipline of futures studies and visioning as a creative and productive planning tool. Discuss trends affecting libraries and possible alternative futures for the information profession. Find out how to communicate more effectively about the future of your library through the use of futures research. You will also have time to think, discuss, and draw your vision of an ideal library.

Statistics for Librarians
The field of librarianship is becoming increasingly numerical in nature, yet few professionals have formal training in statistics. This workshop will outline basic statistical concepts, while focusing on applied statistical tools for librarianship, including sampling, surveys, and interpreting electronic journal/database usage reports. Discover how you can use data to solve problems that can be quantified, and find out how this will aid in decision-making in your library. This workshop will have a large hands-on component and will illustrate examples from the library literature.
