Letting your hair down in Denver

What to do at the end of the conference day

by Ellen Metter

So, pardner, you’re moseying in to Denver for the ACRL conference, March 15–18, 2001? Glad to let you know that the former cow town now has more to offer than cow pies.

Check the October 2000 C&RL News article, “Denver Diversions,” to learn of daytime events in the Mile High City, and stay tuned for the February 2001 issue, which will give you the low down on eateries. But keep reading if you’d like to know about places where you can kick your heels up, perhaps enjoy a spirit or two, and just unwind from all that learning and networking you’ll be doing at the conference.

Cowboy hospitality
It’s true. Denver does have more than the usual share of cowboy-related attractions—and much of it’s downright fun. On Saturday night, March 17, from 7 to 11:30 p.m., join other conference-goers on an arranged trip to the Grizzly Rose. At the Grizzly, you’ll see more cowboy hats and cowboy boots in a few hours than most people see in a lifetime. The atmosphere is high-charged and friendly, and the music is pure danceable country. You’ll learn to line dance in no time with a country western lesson and then have a live band to try it out to. Visit the Grizzly Rose gift shop to bring home the family their very own country dancing outfits, boots, hats, or shot glasses.

You can also find cowboy duds in downtown Denver by shopping at Overland Fine Sheepskin & Leather—but do notice the word “Fine” in their name and be sure to bring a credit card with a generous limit! (1512 Larimer Street, http://www.overland.com; open weekdays until 9, Saturday until 10, and Sundays until 6.) For cowboy gear that’s a bit kitschier, visit the Crybaby Ranch (1422 Larimer Square, http://www.crybaby ranch.com/; open Friday and Saturday until 7, Sunday until 6.) They’ve got Buffalo Bill Boxer shorts, cowgirl clothes, western furnishings, and lots of other items featuring

Photo credit: Denver Metro Convention & Visitors Bureau

Denver at night

About the author

Ellen Metter is professional studies bibliographer in the Auraria Library at the University of Colorado, Denver, e-mail: emetter@carbon.cudenver.edu
Dangling leather, fringe, spurs, and John Wayne.

Dancing Denver

If one night of cowboy dancing doesn't still your tapping toes, then just keep them tapping. Dancing of just about every style—swing, tango, Irish, contra, and everything in between—can be found on most weekends in Denver. Web sites that will alert you to dances being held the conference weekend include Colorado Friends of Old Time Music and Dance, http://www.cfootmad.com; the Mercury Café, http://www.mercurycafe.com/dance.html; Swing Colorado, http://www.swingcolorado.com; Argentine Tango in Colorado, http://www.ragtime.org/dance/; and the Celtic Connection Dance Page, http://www.celticconnection.com/dance/.

Just a nip of green beer?

If St. Patrick's Day is practically a religious holiday to you, don't worry. Denver residents definitely observe the occasion. If you peek your nose out between conference sessions on March 17th you may catch a wee bit of the St. Patrick's Day Parade, beginning around 9 a.m., winding its way through downtown and ending up at the State Capital.

For exceptional food, an atmosphere that conjures the mists of Ireland, and live Irish music, Fadó's Irish Pub is high on the list of recommended Irish pub/restaurants. Fadó will be sure to have live music the Friday and Saturday of the conference. Irish music "sessions" are also held every Sunday and Monday nights, where musicians gather in a jagged circle to learn new tunes and, without quite meaning to, entertain the pub-goers around them.

For an authentic Irish pub atmosphere where, as one review says, there's "always sure to be an Irishman around," visit local favorite Nallen's Irish Pub, where the Guinness and music will be flowing on St. Pat's. New to the Denver area is the Celtic Tavern where, on March 17th, they plan to block off the street around the tavern and truly indulge in the holiday. See the sidebar on the next page for more information on these pubs.

Drinks, conversation, and laughs

Restaurants open for evening conversation abound in Denver. For dim lights and spirits, some downtown bars and pubs that come recommended include the second floor of the Wynkoop Brewery (1634 18th Street, at Wynkoop, (303) 297-2700) for unique brews and pool playing; The Cruise Room, at the Oxford Hotel (1600 17th Street, Denver, (303) 628-5400), featuring art deco 40s décor and lighting conducive to relaxing and romancing (1600 17th Street, (303) 825-1107); and Marlowe's, an "upper crust hang-out" that pours a "mean martini" (511 16th Street Mall, (303) 595-3700).

Bars that regularly feature live music in-elude Brendan’s Pub, a cozy, basement establishment featuring blues and jazz (1624 Market Street, at 16th Street, (303) 595-0609) and El Chapultepec: a bit of a hole-in-the-wall but renowned in Denver for high-quality jazz (1962 Market Street, at 19th; (303) 295-9126).

To sing as you sip, visit Sing Sing (1735 19th Street, at Wynkoop, (303) 291-0880), where you can harmonize with piano players known for their musical abilities and wit. Looking for something a tad unusual? Check out Genki, Denver’s first oxygen bar (1632 Market Street, (303) 892-1600). In the mile high altitude of Denver, Genki may be just the ticket for visiting “low-landers.” A full-tank of oxygen will keep you breathing easy for 20 minutes.

Not afraid of becoming a bit short of breath—with laughter? Visit Comedy Works, where national acts and high quality local comedians perform (1226 15th Street, at Larimer Square, (303) 595-3637 http://www.comedyworks.com/).

Evening cultural events
Just a few blocks from the ACRL conference, theater aficionados will find not one, not two, not three, but eight theaters of varying capacities at the Denver Center for Performing Arts, a.k.a. The Plex (http://www.denvercenter.org).

The 1999 Pulitzer Prize-winning play “Wit,” which tells the story of an English poetry professor diagnosed with ovarian cancer, will be showing at the Space Theatre at the Plex beginning March 15; tickets at (800) 641-1222 or (303) 893-4100. Also at the Plex, “Swan Lake” will be performed by the Colorado Ballet March 15 through 18 at the Auditorium Theater; tickets at http://www.coloradoballet.org/ or (303) 830-TIXS.

Mile high sports
The ACRL National Conference should be energizing, so you can shout out some of that energy by cheering for Colorado athletes. Ice hockey fans can watch the Colorado Avalanche at the Pepsi Center—a fairly easy walk from the conference convention center. The Avs have games on March 17th (playing Detroit) and the 18th (playing Minnesota). Also catch basketball at the Pepsi Center with the Denver Nuggets playing March 16th against the Boston Celtics and March 18th against the New Jersey Nets (yes, there is both an Avalanche and a Nuggets game at the Pepsi Center on the 18th!). Call (303) 405-1111 for ticket information or Ticketmaster at (303) 830-8497 to order tickets for either the Avalanche or the Nuggets.

Not quite Las Vegas
You won’t find Wayne Newton or Cirque du Soleil in Colorado’s gambling towns, but you’ll get a nice mountain view, low stakes gambling, and, for the frugal gambler: nickel slot machines! In downtown Denver, The Ace Express bus leaves from 15th Street and Glenarm Place at the Denver Pavilions to Central City and Black Hawk, adjacent towns offering slot machines and blackjack playing are about 35 miles from Denver.

(continued on page 77)
Unfolding the World of Scientific Information

Introducing the Next Generation ScienceDirect

More choice in digital collections from a breadth of over 1,200 journals, covering all fields of science

New ScienceDirect Navigators, vastly enhanced A&I layers that offer intuitive navigation to over 10,000 journals and 40 million abstracts from a multitude of publishers

Enhanced functionality for searching and exporting to citation management programs

Link to 3 million full-text articles from the world of published science literature with our Open Linking Technologies

Search the Web on ScienceDirect – with Scirus, set to be the world's most comprehensive science search engine, providing fast, relevant search results from the breadth of scientific information on the World Wide Web
Visit ScienceDirect at ALA Midwinter Meeting
January 13th – 15th, Washington, DC
Booth # 1949/1950

New from ScienceDirect

Open Linking Technologies

A suite of linking capabilities to the world of STM literature

- Link from abstracts, references and citations to full-text articles on ScienceDirect
- Link to abstracts and articles from multiple publishers through CrossRef
- Coming soon: Search links to provide dynamic linking to content outside ScienceDirect and CrossRef

Scirus

The powerful new Web search capability available soon through ScienceDirect:

- A filtered, intelligent gateway to science information on the Web
- Highly relevant search results in less than 0.5 seconds
- Also accessible at www.scirus.com

Journal Backfiles

Desktop access to deep historical research with complete backfiles, starting with the Organic Chemistry archival collection

www.sciencedirect.com
Milestones in Health and Medicine, by Anne S. Harding (267 pages, September 2000), provides 500 entries describing advances in the treatment of disease and the understanding of human health. Descriptions of specific diseases include the first time the disease was noted historically and significant advances in treating it; drugs, therapies, and technologies are also given a chronological treatment; an 13-page timeline offers an overview of developments since the first evidence of trepanation around 10,000 B.C. $71.00. Oryx. ISBN 1-57356-140-1.

The Tomb of Christ, by Martin Biddle (172 pages, paperback ed., October 2000), reviews the archeological and architectural history of the structures at the site of the Church of the Holy Sepulchre in Jerusalem, held at least since the year 325 to have been the location of the rock-cut tomb at Golgotha where Jesus was interred after the Crucifixion. The present version of the Edicule, the "little house" in the church that encloses the tomb, dates from 1810, but Biddle argues—based on an 11-year investigation—that there are vestiges of earlier Edicules stretching all the way back to the time of Constantine, and that much of the original rock-cut tomb may still exist. As he puts it, "the layers of previous Edicules can survive one inside the other like the skins of an onion. They suggest that there is much to be discovered when the time comes for restoration." A fascinating analysis, with many photographs, detailed drawings, and diagrams. $21.95. Sutton Publishing, 260 Fifth Ave., New York, NY 10001. ISBN 0-7509-2525-6.

Unheralded Victory: The Defeat of the Viet Cong and the North Vietnamese Army, 1961–1973, by Mark W. Woodruff (338 pages, September 1999), is a reassessment of the success of the American Vietnam War effort, often portrayed as a military defeat. I missed this small-press title when it first came out, but luckily discovered it at a recent conference. Woodruff, an American Marine Corps veteran who now works as a psychologist for the Royal Australian Navy, challenges the popular concept that the conduct and performance of the allied ground troops was substandard, and claims that by the time of the 1973 Paris Peace Accords, the Viet Cong had been soundly defeated and the North Vietnamese Army was a spent force. How and why the myths and misperceptions of the war became generally accepted is the theme of the second part of this book, which offers a sound counterargument to other historians. $24.95. Vandamere Press, P.O. Box 5243, Arlington, VA 22205. ISBN 0-918339-51-0.

"Letting your hair… "continued from p. 21)
Though the bus cost is $15, it’s easy to recoup the cost of the ride through ongoing offers at different casinos in the two towns. (It’s not as easy to recoup what you lose in the casinos so the best advice is: don’t bring a credit card with you!) Call Ace Express at (303) 421-2780 for their schedule and more information about casino rebates.

Upcoming events and even more options
There are bound to be events going on the weekend of the conference that we just don’t know about yet. National musical, theater, dance, comedy, and lecture events often take a leisurely stop in Denver, and small clubs with great acoustics abound. Check for the latest Denver happenings in Westword, a weekly paper that’s Denver’s answer to Manhattan’s Village Voice. Check out their "Best of Denver" recommendations at http://www.westword.com.