ACRL honors the 2003 award winners

A recognition of professional achievement

by Stephanie Sherrod

Excellence in Academic Libraries winners announced

The winners of the 2003 Excellence in Academic Libraries Award are the City College of San Francisco's Louise and Claude Rosenberg, Jr. Library and Learning Resource Center, Baruch College's Newman Library, and the J. Edgar and Louise S. Monroe Library at Loyola University-New Orleans. Sponsored by ACRL and Blackwell's Book Services, the award recognizes the staff of a college, university, and community college library for programs that deliver exemplary services and resources to further the educational mission of the institution.

"Receiving an Excellence in Academic Libraries Award is a national tribute to a library and its staff for the outstanding services, programs, and leadership they provide to their students, administrators, faculty, and community," said Mary Ellen Davis, ACRL executive director.

The Library and Learning Resources Center of the City College of San Francisco

The Library and Learning Resources Center (LLRC) of the City College of San Francisco, winner in the community college category, emphasized how the staff had galvanized themselves into an effective team and lived the mantra of "Helping to Achieve Student Success."

"The selection committee felt that the LLRC's emphasis on 'being about and for student success' spawned energetic, effective, and highly creative programs and efforts," Betsy Wilson, chair of the 2003 Excellence in Academic Libraries Selection Committee, said.

"Delighted, excited, and invigorated are words that best describe how exhilarated I felt when I found out our team (the faculty and staff) at the City College of San Francisco (CCSF) Library and Learning Resources won the prestigious ACRL Excellence in Academic Libraries Award," said Dean Rita Jones. "The close partnership with the faculty, administration, and students at our college enabled us to create innovative programs to serve our 90,000 diverse students and bring the acclaimed award to CCSF. On behalf of CCSF, our students, and the San Francisco Community, we thank you."

Baruch College

Baruch College, winner in the college category, demonstrated how the staff pulled together with limited resources to meet the challenge of supporting the diversity of cultures, languages, and perspectives of the population it serves. "The selection committee salutes Baruch for its many exciting and innovative programs that furthured the mission of the college," said Wilson.

Art Dowling, head of Baruch's Library and Computing and Technology Center, told ACRL, "The award is a great honor for Baruch and for the City University of New York. ACRL is recognizing how well we serve diverse populations: top-ranking business and public affairs faculties, a world class arts and sciences faculty, and students who are among the city's best. These are students who also work nearly full-time, live away from campus, and have very limited time on campus for scholarship outside of class. The award is a tribute to our students, our faculty, the great leadership of the college in President Ned Regan, the commitment of the City University and Chancellor Matthew Goldstein, the vision of William and Anita Newman, and most of all an extremely dedicated, imaginative, and hardworking staff."

About the author

Stephanie Sherrod is ACRL program assistant, e-mail: ssherrod@ala.org
Ross Atkinson, associate university librarian for collections at the Cornell University Library in Ithaca, New York, is the 2003 ACRL Academic/Research Librarian of the Year. The award, sponsored by YBP Library Services, recognizes an outstanding member of the library profession who has made a significant national or international contribution to academic/research librarianship and library development.

The award committee chair, Susan K. Nutter, commended Atkinson noting, "Ross Atkinson is arguably the foremost thinker in collection management in libraries today, and his work is setting the standard for excellence. His scholarly writings have been transformative, and his influence is deep and far-reaching. "He is prized as a contributor to discussions, and his articles are a must-read for all because he combines careful research with visionary and original thinking. His impact on the profession can be measured by the many references to his work by other writers and practitioners and his peers, his presence as required reading in library course syllabi, and in the shaping of programs at various libraries. Ross Atkinson is one of the real intellectual leaders in our profession."

"This is a wonderful honor, and I am so grateful to my colleagues who have recommended me for it," said Atkinson. "Much of my work has been on theory, and I have always been keenly aware that a little theory can sometimes go a long way. I've always felt that the only real value of theory is to assist the reviewing and rethinking of concrete practice."

"So, the best thing ... about this award is that it provides me with a very gratifying sense that at least some of that work has indeed been helpful and applicable to real services. To me, that means everything. I also want to say that one main reason I've been able to pursue the subjects I have is that I've had the good fortune throughout my career to work in a succession of truly outstanding academic libraries; just to work in such a creative atmosphere, just to observe the constant analysis and improvement of services by so many innovative colleagues, has provided the real basis for all of my own work."

Atkinson's record of scholarly writings and publications is largely unmatched in significance. His body of scholarly and theoretical writing on collection management and scholarly communication is among the most influential and thought-provoking appearing in this field. In nominating Atkinson, his peers wrote, "His record of authoring over 30 distinguished publications alone would qualify him for the Academic/Research Librarian of the Year Award, but his service to the profession extends far beyond this."

Atkinson received his B.A. in German from the University of the Pacific in Stockton, California, in 1967. He went on to further study Germanic Languages and Literatures at Harvard University, earning a M.A. in 1969 and a Ph.D. in 1976. In 1977, Atkinson received his M.S. in Library Science from the Simmons College School of Library Science.

He will receive a $3,000 award and a citation at a ceremony and reception on Monday, June 23, 2003, at 4:30 p.m. at the ALA Annual Conference in Toronto. The reception is sponsored by YBP Library Services.

Previous award winners include Shelley Phipps, (2002); Larry Hardesty (2001); Sharon Hogan (2000); Hannelore Rader (1999); Allen B. Veaner (1998); James G. Neal (1997); Ralph Russell (1996); Joseph Boisse (1995); Irene Braden Hoadley (1994); William A. Moffett (1993); Carla Stoffle (1992); Richard DeGennaro (1991); and Patricia Battin (1990).
Loyola University-New Orleans

Loyola University-New Orleans, winner in the university category, was recognized for the way its staff has reinvented the library, not only with regard to the quality and quantity of information resources, but in terms of basic functions and expanding services.

Wilson and the selection committee commented, "Loyola University-New Orleans, through its leadership, partnerships, creativity, and innovation, has demonstrated itself to be a model of what excellent libraries are and will become."

"The Monroe Library faculty and staff at Loyola University-New Orleans are thrilled to receive the Excellence in Academic Libraries award as an affirmation of their contributions to achieving excellence and as an acknowledgment of the partnerships the library shares with the campus community," said Mary Lee Sweat, director of libraries at Loyola University-New Orleans. "It is difficult to imagine a more talented and innovative group of people than our library faculty and staff, and I feel fortunate to work with them in achieving this award."

Each winning library will receive $3,000 and a citation, to be presented at an award ceremony held on each recipient's campus. The winners will also receive special recognition at the ACRL President's Program during the ALA Annual Conference, Monday, June 23, at 1:30 p.m. in Toronto.

Cheng receives Doctoral Dissertation Fellowship

Yungrang Laura Cheng, a Ph.D. candidate from Indiana University, has been awarded the 2003 ACRL Doctoral Dissertation Fellowship for her proposal, "Thoughts, feelings and actions: Quantitative comparisons of interactions and relationships among three factors in college students' information seeking." Sponsored by Thompson ISI, the fellowship fosters research in academic librarianship by encouraging and supporting dissertation research.

Kathryn Blackmer-Reyes, chair of the selection committee, said, "Cheng's use of both qualitative and quantitative methodologies makes her proposal very innovative. Her work with complex methodologies in both formats strengthens her research question of information seeking very uniquely. While her interest in how students process information is informative, it is precisely her research methodology that placed her work above the other candidates. It should offer insights useful to front-line academic librarians on how and why students seek information."

The award of $1,500 and a plaque will be presented to Cheng at the ALA Annual Conference during the ACRL President's Program, Monday, June 23, at 1:30 p.m.

Farrell & Truitt awarded Lazerow Fellowship

Katharine Farrell, Princeton University Library, and Marc Truitt, University of Notre Dame Library, are the winners of the Samuel Lazerow Fellowship for their proposal to develop standards for acquisitions data in integrated library systems. Sponsored by Thompson ISI, the award fosters advances in collection development and technical services by providing fellowships to librarians for travel or writing in those fields.

"The research proposed by Farrell and Truitt addresses a significant concern for many academic libraries and will be an important contribution to the field," said committee chair George Abbott.

The award of $1,000 and plaques will be presented at the ALA Annual Conference during the ACRL President's Program, Monday, June 23, 2003, at 1:30 p.m.

Snavely wins IS Miriam Dudley Instruction Librarian Award

Loanne Snavely, head of instructional programs at Pennsylvania State University Libraries, is the winner of the ACRL Instruction Section's Miriam Dudley Instruction Librarian Award.

This award recognizes a librarian who has made a significant contribution to the advancement of instruction in a college or research library environment.

Chair of the Dudley award committee Beth Woodard wrote, "As one of her nominators so aptly described it, Loanne Snavely has been a 'consistent and important voice in the development and maturation of information literacy. . . . Adding Loanne's name to the list of distinguished Miriam Dudley Award winners is overdue.'"
The award is sponsored by Elsevier Science on behalf of its journal Research Strategies. A check for $1,000 and a plaque will be presented to Snively at the ALA Annual Conference during the IS Program, Sunday, June 22, 2003, at 1:30 p.m.

Little honored with Marta Lange/CQ Award

The late Rosemary Allen Little, public administration, politics, and law librarian at Princeton University Library, has been named the 2003 recipient of Marta Lange/ Congressional Quarterly (CQ) Award. The award, established in 1996 by the ACRL Law and Political Science Section (LPSS), honors an academic or law librarian who has made distinguished contributions to bibliography and information service in law or political science.

Connie Salyers Stoner, chair of the Marta Lange Award Committee, said, "The letters of nomination commend Rosemary Little as a lifelong champion including selfless dedication to the promotion of access to government information. She helped found ALA's Government Documents Round Table (GODORT), through which she furthered awareness of international and foreign government documents. Her career path at Princeton was a model of excellence in the areas of mentorship, professional development, and international engagement. Several of her Princeton faculty colleagues praised her commitment for working with people at every stage of their academic careers, from undergraduates to advanced scholars. She treated students with the same professionalism, dedication, and respect she accorded senior members of the faculty. She was proactive and once she knew students or faculty scholarly concerns, she did not simply wait for requests. She would acquire materials to support their research needs.

"Virtually everyone who has spent any time in the Princeton Politics Department has a positive story to tell about her professionalism and love of knowledge."

Congressional Quarterly, Inc., sponsor of the award, will present the $1,000 award and plaque at the ALA Annual Conference during the Marta Lange/CQ Luncheon on Saturday, June 21, 2003, at 11:30 a.m.

Dickstein wins WSS Career Achievement Award

Ruth H. Dickstein, social sciences librarian at the University of Arizona, has been selected as the 2003 winner of the ACRL Women's Studies Section (WSS) Career Achievement Award. The award, sponsored by Greenwood Publishing Group, Inc., honors significant long-standing contributions to women's studies librarianship over the course of a career.

"Ruth Dickstein is an outstanding example of a women's studies librarian," said Connie Phelps, chair of the WSS award committee. "She has made important, ground-breaking contributions to the field of women's studies librarianship with her research and publications, her professional presentations, her mentoring of students and colleagues, and her service to the profession through WSS, of which she was a founding member. Her work as the Women's Studies librarian at the University of Arizona is a model for collaborative teaching."

A cash prize of $1,000 and a plaque will be presented to Dickstein at the 2003 ALA Annual Conference during the WSS Program, Monday, June 23, at 8:30 a.m.

WSS Significant Achievement Award goes to Barnes

Sherri Barnes, associate librarian for women's studies, U.S. history, and the writing program and humanities collection coordinator at the University of California-Santa Barbara, is the winner of the 2003 WSS Award for Significant Achievement in Women's Studies Librarianship. The award honors a significant or one-time contribution to women's studies librarianship.

"Sherri's Web site, Black American Feminism: A Multidisciplinary Bibliography, brings together a vast number of citations from a variety of publications and makes the information available to anyone seeking information on African American feminist thought," said committee chair Connie Phelps. "A project like this in a book format would be a useful tool, but having the information available on a Web site will give access to a much greater number of people."

A cash prize of $1,000 and a plaque will be presented to Barnes at the WSS Program during the 2003 ALA Annual Conference, Monday, June 23, at 8:30 a.m.
Proceedings of the 4th Northumbria International Conference on Performance Measurement in Libraries and Information Services

The Northumbria conferences cover measuring the electronic library environment, service quality from the user’s perspective, and library users’ changing needs, as well as communicating library contributions to education and research in terms of measurable impacts and outcomes. At this conference, held in Pittsburgh August 12–16, 2001, participants addressed these issues, focusing on “meaningful measures for emerging realities.” Joan Stein, Martha Kyrillidou, Denise Davis, eds. 2002. 364 pp. ISBN 0-918006-83-X.

New SPEC Kits

SPEC Kit 268, Reference Service Statistics and Assessment
Eric Novotny • Sept. 2002 • 144 pp.

SPEC Kit 269, Integrating Preservation Activities

SPEC Kit 270, Core Competencies

SPEC Kit 271, Library Systems Office Organization

SPEC Kit 272, Insuring & Valuing Research Library Collections

SPEC Kit 273, Chat Reference

To order ARL publications, see <http://www.arl.org/pubscat/>.

ARL/OLMS Online Lyceum Courses

Accessible Web Design—Newly Revised!
April 21–May 9, 2003

Library Conflict Management
April 28–May 16, 2003

Assessment for Advancing Diversity in Libraries
May 12–30, 2003

Coaching for Performance
May 14–June 6, 2003

Effective Decision Making
June 14–25, 2003

Register now! Visit <http://db.arl.org/training/lycreg.html>.